POPULAR Ludlow Case Marks a Revolution in Military Methods.

MR. CLEVELAND'S ACTION

His Refusal to Approve the Findings an Intimation That Subordinates May Now Have an Appeal-Personal Resentment Said to Have Figured in This Instance.

The refusal of President Cleveland to approve the findings of the examining board in the case of Commander Ludiow is one of the most important cases con-cerning the naval personnel he has taken up since his inauguration.

For a century it has been a doctrine that the duties of the Executive in such cases was merely perfunctory. It was known that he took particular interest in the selection of the general officers of the army and the bureau chiefs of the navy. His interest in the personnel was supposed to end with such officers, except when powerful influences were exerted in the case of special individuals.

His refusal, therefore, to consider the action of the examining board in Comman-der Ludlow's case as conclusive has created great interest in paval circles and will undoubtedly have an important effect upon the discipline of the service. PERSONAL RESENTMENT. When Commander Ludlow was called upon ten years ago to give his opinion of a subordinate he spoke in excellent terms of the officer. Eight years afterward, with the same knowledge upon which to base conclusions, he declared the same subordinate unfitted for promotion.

Both of these statements were made under oath, and the form of each showed that Commander Ludiow prepared his answers. very deliberately. The subordinate has satisfied the President, at least, that on making his second statement Commander Ludlow has permitted his personal resentment to influence his official actions.

Particularly in the Navy is the matter of record of great importance in determining the fitness of an officer for promotion. The authorities in Washington must give great weight to the declarations of command-ing officers, and if this great trust is to be violated and to be used as a lever for wreakviolated and to be used as a lever for wreaking vengeance upon inferiors, the efficiency of the service will be paralyzed.

The Navy Department has gone to great trouble in getting up a form of report for determining the fitness of officers for important work and services. Those who have been entrusted with the prerogative of making these reports have been compelled to do so under the solemnity of an eath. They are only made at periodical intervals, and safeguards are thrown around for the pro-safeguards are thrown around for the protection of the individual. PRESIDENT'S DELIBERATE ACTION. It has been the intention of the Department to compel superior officers to make definite charges. The individual thus ac-cused of specific offenses has a remedy

It has been Commander Ludlow's mis fortune to be charged by no less an authority than the President with this offense, for in disapproving the action of the board recommending his promotion the President substantiates this accusation The promotion of many younger officers has been delayed during the past year by reason of the unfavorable reports of com-manding officers, and the question is now being asked to what extent has injustice been done them? The success that Commander Sperry has OTHERS MAY SEEK PROTECTION. The only way in which punishment can be meted out to commanders who abuse their matters of investigation, and that is the only time when the wronged individual can receive due consideration. The Navy Department would undoubtedly aid any junior in bringing to punishment any commander who had abused a trust, but it is almost an impossibility for an inferior to collect evidence abourd a warship against his commander. Just how a new examining board can help Commander Ludiow seems a mystery. The same evidence will probably be presented and it must eventually go to the President as the final reviewing authority.
